Everett and Malden: Data Focus

"For immigrants, we advise each other on how to make this new place home. We have strengths in our ability to organize. We've created organizations and centers that keep on this tradition of service and helping."

"Creating safe spaces for adults to share experiences with youth, and let them know they're not alone; or for parents to learn about resources and opportunities. It doesn't need to be labeled as mental health care. We know the benefits of being in that space together include our mental health."

Describing the conditions that promote health: "To live in an environment where you don't feel discriminated against, where you feel welcome, where you can manage your life, your family life and community life in peace, with love."

Referring to not having to make choices between paying for rent versus medicine having health impacts: "Having available resources is a huge change. Based on that, you can have a good mental state and emotional health. You can feel safe and secure, and have good health."
